

CONSTITUTION

For the perpetual posterity for all indigenous inhabitants

The

CROWN OF JUDAH TRIBAL NATION OF YASHAR’EL

throughout all North, South, Central America and Africa

CROWN OF JUDAH TRIBAL NATION OF YASHAR’EL

Through the Matriarchy of all life, we, born as clans, to become tribes, and now, A Nation of tribes herein.

Preamble

We, the People of the CROWN OF JUDAH TRIBAL NATION OF YASHAR’EL (COJ), here and now, lay down in writing, the laws and way of life, for the historically established nation of people through ancestral lineage, to provide general welfare, conserve and re-develop our lands and resources, to provide common defense and protections for ourselves and our posterity, to resecure our way of life, structures and immunities pre-established at the onset of

Creation of all, that we are indeed the true people, the original people and, the real people of the Erets (earth), with rights bestowed by The Great Spirit, and are now standing up to reclaim and reestablish that which was stolen and disguised but now revealed through the love of The Great Spirit.

We, the sovereign Indigenous tribes and nations of the Americas, the Pacific and of Africa, united by our shared heritage and mutual recognition of sovereignty, do hereby establish this Constitution to provide a comprehensive framework for social, economic, environmental, and political sustainability. This Constitution is founded upon the principles of cultural preservation, economic empowerment, and the protection of sovereign rights while fostering global collaboration and collective prosperity for present and future generations.

Article I: Foundational Principles

Section 1: Sovereignty

Each member tribe of COJ retains its inherent autonomy and self-determination, with the authority to govern its cultural, economic, and political affairs without external interference. COJ serves as an advocate and facilitator, supporting the independence and self-governance of its members while respecting their unique traditions, governance structures, and resource management practices.

Section 2: Cultural Preservation

COJ is committed to the protection, promotion, and preservation of Indigenous traditions, languages, sacred sites, ceremonies, and intellectual property. Through its Cultural Preservation Department, COJ facilitates intertribal unity by organizing cultural exchanges and educational initiatives that honor and safeguard Indigenous heritage.

Section 3: Economic Empowerment

To promote financial stability and growth among member tribes, COJ shall establish sustainable trade agreements and cooperative economic ventures. Mechanisms such as the Tribal Prosperity Fund and Tribal Land Bank shall ensure equitable financial opportunities, resource-sharing, and economic sustainability.

Article II: Governance Structure

The governance structure of COJ comprises the Central Transnational Council (CTC), the Executive Leadership, and the Tribal Arbitration Panel (TAP). The CTC serves as the legislative body, while the Executive Leadership manages operations, and the TAP ensures judicial oversight.

Article III: Membership

Membership in COJ is open to all sovereign Indigenous tribes within the Americas and Pacific Islands. Fees and financial contributions shall be determined by the Central Transnational Council and reviewed periodically to ensure equitable contribution and sustainability.

Article IV: COJ Departments

COJ departments focus on areas such as tribal registry, economic development, legal advocacy, and cultural preservation. Each department shall work collaboratively to advance the interests of member tribes.

Article V: Economic Alliance

The Global Indigenous Trade Network (GITN) shall facilitate economic collaborations while ensuring that land usage and investment adhere to tribal laws and sustainable development principles.

Article VI: Political Collaboration

COJ shall provide a unified voice for Indigenous rights in global forums, ensuring representation, advocacy for treaties, and strategic partnerships.

Article VII: Dispute Resolution

Disputes arising within COJ shall be resolved by the Tribal Arbitration Panel (TAP) within a transparent and timely process, with appeals escalated to the CTC when necessary.

Article VIII: Amendments

Amendments to this Constitution require a two-thirds majority vote of the CTC, following consultation with member tribes during the review phase.

Article IX: Dissolution

The dissolution of COJ requires unanimous consent from the founding tribes. Upon dissolution, all assets shall be equitably distributed, and liabilities addressed responsibly.

Article X: Implementation

This Constitution becomes effective upon ratification by a two-thirds majority of the CTC, ensuring fair and transparent application of all provisions.

Article XI: Federal Relationship
